How Vermont Hens Won the Championship of America

All loyal Vermonters have noted with considerable pride the high place which Vermont poultry breeders have always taken when their fowls compete with those of other states. C. A. Crampton, Jr., of St. Albans, Vt., one of the prize winners in the Storrs international laying contest last year in a letter to C. S. Page of Hyde Park, gives a suggestion as to how he did it. He writes: "I feed Page's green bone in moderate quantities to breeding stock, layers and young chickens and consider it an important item in developing and improving my heavy laying strain. My pen won second prize and championship of America (all breeds, 100 pens) at Storrs international laying contest last year." Poultrymen desiring to emulate the example of Mr. Crampton will do well to send $4.00 to Mr. Page and procure a 200-35. harrel of his green cut bone meat. On receipt of check, cash, express or postal money order, the goods will be sent freight paid to almost any station .- adv.
